Cincinnati Local Unit Adopts a Highway By Robert Ransdell

We are proud to inform all members that we have been successful in adopting a road-way right here in our region. This means that we have two signs on each entrance to the road that read, "NATIONAL ALLIANCE RIPDR. PIERCE."

The road we chose to adopt is perhaps the busiest road in the Cincinnati suburb of Florence, KY, as it has heavy car traffic every day. Our signs are really a sight to see and are a message to the entire community that not only are we actively involved in keeping the environment clean and neat, but that we are also an organization that refuses to be sentenced to the fringe, as the media attempts to do with their biased coverage of our activities. What fringe organization has signs erected on a busy road which are funded 100% by the state?

All Local Units that might be considering adopting a highway in their region will be happy to find that it is very easy and inexpensive. Simply contact your local transportation department and ask if they have a program in your area. If they do, then all you will be expected to do is sign a contract promising to stage three or four cleanups of the road you choose a year, all at your Local Unit's leisure. In exchange for the volunteer work, you will get two signs erected free of any charge with our organization's name on them.

We chose to add in a tribute to our founder as well as our name. This is yet another way that we can get our name out there in a positive fashion without spending a fortune.

It might be advised that, if asked, you tell the officials that the National Alliance is a European cultural organization, as this will better the odds of getting the signs up. Remember, it is not as if you are recruiting a member, in which case we are to never compromise our values or goals in any way in order to curry favor with them. Unlike certain "movement" groups who have permanently sullied their reputations in the public mind by conforming to media stereotypes, our name does not immediately put up a red flag with the average citizen so you should attempt to not put one up yourself as you go about adopting your road.

Should the media attack the concept of the top pro-White organization in America helping to keep the community clean, they may risk showing their true colors to the public; that is that they care more about the state adhering to Political Correctness than the cleanliness of the environment and community.

Some might scoff at the likelihood of signs such as the ones we have here in Cincinnati -- and those that our Baltimore Local Unit was also successful in getting up in their region -- as a real long shot. We have to admit it was kind of surreal to actually see them standing. However, the proof is on the front of this Bulletin that Local Units can accomplish many things if they simply use a little imagination.

Western Alliance Members Continue Powerhouse Activism

In northern California, Alliance activist Ken D. (associated with the Sacramento Local Unit), continues an impressive streak of unrelenting activism. During the month of June, Ken devoted a portion of two days a week getting hundreds of Alliance leaflets out to the public at area shopping centers and residential areas in the coastal city of Santa Cruz, located south of the San Francisco Bay area. Unlike many communities in this area, Santa Cruz is still very White. His favorite place to distribute our "Invasion" leaflet are Home Depot stores, where Mexicans gather in hopes of obtaining day labor mostly from wealthy Whites.

In addition to leaflets, Ken has also posted during this time hundreds of "Bring Our Troops Home and Put Them on the Mexican Border" stickers as well. The surrounding towns boast a pressing influx of Mexicans and they represent an irritant to the city of Santa Cruz. These stickers tend to stay up Ken reports.

Ken says that he enjoys the work and the activity is good exercise and makes him feel he is doing his part in reaching out to people.

In another example of exemplary activism, another Sacramento Unit member, Dereck B., is not only a hard working member in his home city, but he is also an activist even when he's traveling and on holidays.

Over the July 4th weekend, Dereck visited Portland, OR to attend a music festival in the city. While there for several days, Dereck posted hundreds of Alliance stickers in the downtown area. He posted mainly "Earth's Most Endangered Species... The White Race" stickers and our "Stop Immigration" stickers.

He noticed while he was in town that the "Preserve the White Race" stickers were taken down in short order, but the anti-immigration sticker tended to stay up. In any event, over the time he was there, when a sticker came down he came by shortly after to put them back up.

Also, Dereck visited one of Portland's largest bookstores and while there spent some time distributing Alliance business cards. This member's commitment shines through even on his vacation!

And in Utah, over the Memorial Day Weekend, Helena H. single-handedly delivered 150 packets of Alliance materials in a Salt Lake City neighborhood. Her choice of leaflets for each packet were "What Did You Do During the Revolution, Daddy?," "What Happened to my Neighborhood?," and "Missing: A Future For White Children." These particular fliers were selected for the July Fourth Holiday.

The weather is hot and so is the level of commitment of these activists to the National Alliance!

Weaver Keeps the Pace in Georgia

Highly dedicated Alliance activist Mike Weaver of Columbus, GA has been distributing hundreds of pieces of Alliance material every single day in his home state. Recently, Mike has been focusing his distributions on White residents who have careers in key positions of influence, particularly law enforcement, those employed in the news media, as well as attorneys and others in the legal field. Mike is attempting to educate these recipients on Jewish media power, the out-of-control Black crime rate, and on the dangers of non-White immigration.

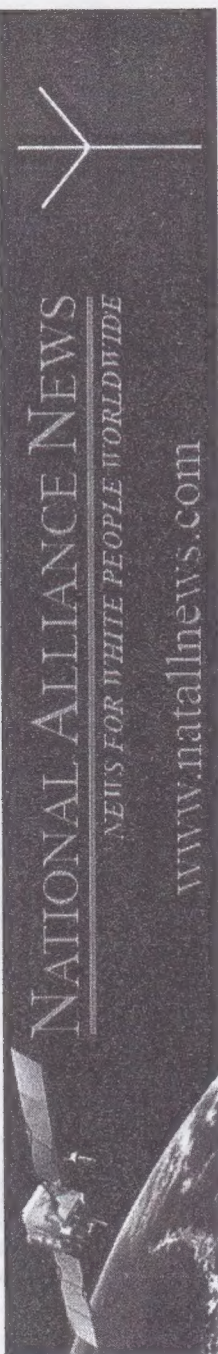

On a daily basis the National Office receives After Action reports from Mike regarding his latest distributions. And so far to date he tells us that he has never encountered any serious problems in his activities. Actually, the biggest problem Mike says he faces is that he always needs more material for distribution.

Any member who would like to help Mike out by purchasing materials for him should contact the National Office at 304/653-4707.

More Philly Activity Planned

With the success of our May meeting in Philadelphia, we are planning more activities for the area including regularly scheduled meetings, lectures with guest speakers, and coordinated activism. Any members residing in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, or Delaware who would like to get involved in these activities should contact the National Office or email Chairman Gliebe at: erich@resistance.com.

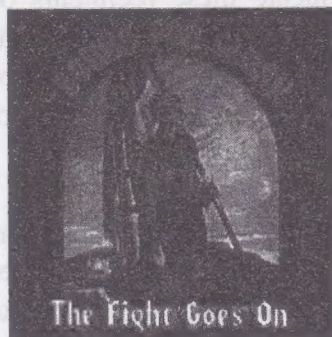

Remember to go to the National Alliance News Web Site to stay updated on the latest news and events of concern to National Alliance Members!

Book of the Month:

Lindbergh

By A. Scott Berg

Recently published autobiography of one of America's greatest sons. He was a hero from the time of his historic solo trans-Atlantic flight from New York to Paris up to the moment he decided to intervene in Jewish plans to enlist America's support in a war against National Socialist Germany. Charles Lindbergh was an admirer of Hitler and his regime and although not an overt racist, felt that another world war would spell disaster for the White race worldwide.

This story details his fall off the pedestal of being America's greatest hero to being demonized in the Jewish press as a Nazi supporter, simply because he felt there was no good reason for a war between America and Germany and for taking to task the most powerful warmongers in the land including President Franklin Roosevelt.

And, of course, the author details, the history of the Lindbergh family and life of "Lucky Lindy" from his early "barnstorming" days of pioneering aviation to the famous baby Lindbergh kidnapping case and his varied accomplishments as a respected scientist and "Father of American Commercial Aviation." His life closes with his infinitely detailed plans for his own death.

A definitive account of one of America's most remarkable men. The author was the first researcher to be allowed access to the Lindbergh private family library. Well-illustrated. Large format with dust jacket. 628 pages, hard cover.

Getting to Know Your Neighbor

Members of the Sacramento Local Unit would like to extend an invitation to members in California and Western Nevada who would like to get away from the feeling of being isolated because of their beliefs and contact the regional Alliance to get to know other members of the Alliance community.

This includes more than just attending meetings in Sacramento and individual / group activism, but also joining together to enjoy fellowship and unity of purpose in a multitude of enjoyable scenarios including but not limited to attending seminars such as David Irving lectures, meetings of issue groups to meet others of like mind, music festivals (especially Celtic and other European ethnic events), Folk and Bluegrass events, county fairs, gun shows, barbecues, camping, and more.

We'd like to encourage the feeling of community among our members and to do that all one needs to do is reach out to this invitation and be with us when you can. It is, of course, difficult to achieve a physical community at this time, especially as members in this region have long distances to traverse. However, we certainly are a community of the mind and it behooves all of us to outreach to our fellow members just as we do to the general public. Doing so builds morale, thus breaking the feeling of isolation and increases commitment to Our Cause.

Make your participation in the National Alliance more than just a membership. Think of yourself as a part of a budding community, a place where responsible White Americans of racial consciousness congregate.

Think of the National Alliance as life itself. If you would like to meet your neighbors, simply call the Sacramento Alliance telephone number at: 530-757-3818 and leave a message.

Sacrificing for the Greater Cause

By Jim Ring

When is the last time you heard someone win an award, walk up to the microphone and say, "There is no one to thank; I did it all myself. So I'm going to put this award on my mantle where I can easily share it with me, myself, and I."

That would be quite a narcissistic display, now wouldn't it? The reality is, however, that very few people get where they are in the world without the help of others. It takes hard work, innovation, and strong discipline to focus on the task at hand.

True for individuals and even more so for organizations looking to grow in power and influence. One probably thinks of our Local Units in particular; of people working together as a group to further our message in their region. One might also think of the National Office staff that must be able to work effectively and efficiently together on a nearly daily basis.

But how about those members who are more or less by themselves? That is, they don't belong to a Local Unit nor perhaps do they even have another member in reasonable distance to work with.

Can these members be a part of the team? You bet they can. All members in this situation can be, in effect, a unit of one when it comes to activism. In this small effort to reach new people, the individual member is contributing to the entire team in his or her local area.

If these members are unable to be active in some way or another, there is another very important way in which they can manifest themselves as an import team member and that is through their financial sacrifice.

Approximately 80% of members pledge at the minimum level, so it can be somewhat of an irritant when the National Office staff gets accused of not doing enough to move the organization forward when in effect the amount of progress it can make is directly tied to its members.

A huge part of the capabilities of the National Office rests upon what kind of financial resources it can draw upon. If the 80% who are pledging at the minimum could stop and reflect upon their personal situations and make a fair judgment as to whether they could afford to increase their pledges, I'll wager that a nice percentage of those members could indeed make an increase in their monthly pledge even if it only be an extra $5 or $10 per month more.

One might say that, "Hey, I'm not making any more money now than when I joined." True. But the member needs to take the next step. Can he or she "find the money" from their current situation?

Do you have any vices? Drink a few too many beers or smoke cigarettes? Do you have some luxuries you could scale back on like eating out most of the week or visiting the movie theaters on a weekly basis?

Well, there's the money. You could give a little more without drastically affecting your lifestyle. It all depends on how much you really want to work for change.

There it is. If you're a member because you view us as a political opportunity that is going to make changes for you, then I'm afraid you probably will not be with us for too long unless you come to grips with the severity of the situation.

You really want to win? Then the first victory you need to accomplish is the one over yourself. If you cannot change yourself you have no chance of changing the world. Can you become the revolutionary that you need to be? Can you stop your wasteful vices? Can you sacrifice some of your small pleasures for the greater good of future generations?

Do that and be a revolutionary member. The National Alliance is a revolutionary cause, and not just another organization. Join with other Alliance activists as a team and work to change the world, and help make it a better place for everyone. The White world of the future will remember you for it. Otherwise, as Adolf Hitler said, "The earth will continue to spin through the ether without us." It really is up to you.

Taking Advantage of What's Ahead
Commentary by Chairman Erich Gliebe

Now is the time to think about how we, as an organization, will approach this year's Presidential campaign and its aftermath. With the official nominations of Democrat Barack Obama and Republican John McCain being merely formalities to be taken care of at the party conventions, there aren't any secrets about who is going to be running for the White House. What are some things we should keep in mind as we go about our work as White activists?

The first thing to remember is that, as an organization, we don't have much good to say about mass democracy because it is a dishonest system of government. It is dishonest because it claims that "the people" have the power when, in truth, it is the mass media that have the power. Everything that people think they know is told to them or shown to them by the mass media. What's worse is that the media are controlled by our mortal enemies the Jews, and that makes the system of mass democracy as it exists in the United States today not only dishonest but also harmful – in fact, deadly – to the White race. So mass democracy doesn't score many points with us, and it will be thrown out or greatly modified in the White racial state of the future.

But although we don't support the democratic system and its farce elections, we should still pay attention to what goes on because, as activists, we can adjust our tactics depending on what's happening in the political arena. Since our race will perish if enough Whites don't wake up soon, what we want out of this year's Presidential election is enough conflict or bad news that Whites start to wake up en masse.

Would the election of a Black President cause that to happen? After observing the primaries and seeing how many Whites support Obama, I'm not sure electing him would wake up many of our kinsmen; as a group, they appear to be docile and apathetic, with no change in sight. Besides, Obama is a pretty "White" Black, and he has been trying to appear even more White in his speeches since he secured the Democratic nomination. If the outright Black racist Al Sharpton had been the Democratic nominee, we could count on him to polarize the country along racial lines, which would induce more Whites to check out the Alliance. With Obama, I'm not sure that's going to happen.

Perhaps our best hope is for John McCain to win the election in a very close race. If that happens, Blacks and other non-Whites might feel like they were cheated. If we're lucky, they'll set cities afire, riot, and go on killing rampages, similar to what they did in Los Angeles after the verdict in the Rodney King case was released back in 1992. What followed those riots was perhaps the best recruiting time in Alliance history, and I'd expect similar results if McCain won by a nose in November.

For us now, the important thing is to get ready to take advantage of whatever happens. The next few months could bring us to a turning point in our struggle for our race's independence, and we can't afford to waste the opportunity. — E.J.G.
